

Blog Design

My blog website will be a single page app that will have two toggleable columns on each side. The first column will be a menu that can toggle between modes to create a blog, edit a blog, or view / delete a blog, as well as display the logged in user or provide them the forms to login (as demonstrated in the third image). The center content area will change depending on if the user is creating or editing a new blog or viewing blogs. The right-side column will be a selectable list of blog titles, that the user can edit, view, or delete based on the current mode. Deleting can be done directly from display mode, and it will create a popup confirmation, as shown in the second image.

Display Mode

Delete / Log in

Edit

